

White .

Sauvignon Blanc, Roc de Belame, La Montagne Noire, France

Glass 4 | Bottle 22

Its color is pale yellow. Its fragrance is gushing, powerful and aromatic.

Spilling exotic fruit like mango, lime and lychee. Green apples and figs as well.

It has a long-lasting fresh aftertaste.

Chardonnay, Roc de Belame, La Montagne Noire, France

Glass 4.8 | Bottle 27.5

Golden chardonnay with lots of character and a fine bouquet. The palate keeps up the fruity theme with peach, pear and pineapple. Summer in a glass. Suits salads, chicken and fish well.

Pinot Grigio ‘Kris’, Veneto, Italy

Glass 5 | Bottle 28

Thirst quenching and kindly stimulating. A pinot grigio at its best. Due to its Northern origin, where warm days alternate chilly nights, it has a very pleasant refreshing acidity.

Godello ‘Montenovo’, Bodegas ValdeSil, Valdeorras, Spain

Bottle 29.5

This wine comes from the oldest domains of Galicia, already known to the Romans for its gold ore and lime stone, where the oldest vines are found. Just north of Portugal, south of Bilbao. This astonishing gastronomic wine is denoted by its goldrimmed minerals and accordingly can handle every meal, even intense herbs like wasabi.

Sancerre, Domaine des Brosses, Loire, France

Bottle 34.5

Sauvignon Blanc in optima forma. A full bodied classic Sancerre of a small family domain of which one can clearly distinguish the chalky hills in the nose. It is bone dry, with refined longlasting flavours of subtle fruit and some pronounced aroma’s.

Viogner, Domaine Verena Wyss, Languedoc, France

Bottle 36.5

Biological, typical viogner. Comes from a small topdomaine. Floral taste and very pure.

Chablis, Domaine Fèvre, Bourgogne, France

Bottle 39.5

This wine is produced on one of the largest family owned domains of Chablis: Nathalie & Gilles Fevre. The vastness of it enables them to pick the finest grapes for themselves and sell the rest. This results in phenomenal quality wines, year after year. A clear Chablis: no wood, rich in minerals, due to the chalky soils of the terrains. The kind of Chablis one hopes for, the way it is supposed to be.

White .

Saint Aubin Premier Cru, Hubert Bouzereau-Gruere et filles, Bourgogne, France

Bottle 55.5

A splendid wine. Produced by the two sisters Marie Anne and Marie Laure, descendants of a very old, high esteemed family business. Clearly one of the best vines in the district, even considered that this region produces very famous wines like Meursault, which is situated only a stone’s throw away. This rich, refined elegance you may also expect in your glass.

Rosé .

Grenache Merlot, Les Vignerons, France

Glass 3.7 | Bottle 21.5

This blend of the two very popular grapes Grenache and Merlot proves their perfect match. You will immediately recognize berries on one side and passion fruit on the other. They mingle fine and perfectly accommodate salads and all kinds of meat.

Quat’ Saisons, Chateau La Mascaronne, Provence, France

Bottle 32.5

This biologically produced light colored subtle wine is quite aromatic, soft in taste and reminds you of ‘Joie de vivre’ in the Provence, where the rich and famous tend to enjoy live to the max four seasons long. Shut your eyes and you will find yourself on the sunny Croisette in Cannes, among movie stars. Open your eyes and you might just find one or two of them on our terrace.

Sparkling .

Cava Brut, Molí Coloma, Penedès, Spain

Glass 5.5 | Bottle 29.5

Fresh and fruity aromas, with subtle citrus and even a hint of grapefruit. Produced with three regional grapes from Penedes, which results in a rich, long-lasting, full bodied taste.

Champagne Collet, Brut ‘Art Deco’, France

Bottle 58.5

Our cava is absolutely great, no doubt. Much better than the widely offered prosecco all over town. However it is no competition for this champagne. Here we have a softly sparkling present to yourself, because you deserved it somehow. It has ripened long in the cellars in the bottle. You will find a reason to order one. It is rich in taste, with less acids than usual in so many champagnes. One can easily drink more than just a sip to toast with. Don’t, please don’t remember the name of this winemaker. We would like to keep it a secret.

Red .

Syrah, Roc de Belame, France

Glass 4 | Bottle 21

Ruby red, close to purple. A fragrance reminiscent of black pepper and forest berries with a hint of sweet herbs. This is a truly fine wine for a reasonable price. A fruity, elegant, soft structured, delicate wine.

Primitivo, Montenero, Italy

Glass 4.8 | Bottle 25

This Primitivo is brought to you from the heel of the Italian boot: Apulia. Historically known as a great wine growing region, it has gained even more importance in the last few years, producing full bodied wines full of sweet ripe fruit flavours. It goes very well with red roasted meat and spicy stews. You will immediately appreciate the tones of anise and cinnamon and its smoky touch. Northern Americans would recognize it as a Zinfandel.

Grenache – Syrah ‘La Tribu’, Valencia, Spain

Bottle 26.5

Mediterranean seasoning, spices and herbs. Southern spirit and lots of character, soft tanines and dark red fruit. Ideal for sipping as an apéritif, slightly chilled, but also the perfect companion for a fine supper.

Valpolicella Ripasso Superiore, Corte Guala, Veneto, Italy

Bottle 34.5

The little brother of famous Amarone. Maybe, just maybe, a tiny bit less powerful, certainly a lot less expensive, but clearly the same strong genes: soft tanines, full bodied, tones of dried fruit, no abundancy, just perfect.

Chianti Classico, Fattoria Lornaño, Toscana, Italy

Bottle 36.5

This wine is produced on a small scale, family owned domain in the heart of Tuscany. Of course Italy is known for its huge grape variety. This is a classical example of the Sangiovese grape: juicy red fruit with a hint of cherry. And on top of it a subtle oak character.

Ribera del Duero Crianza ‘Gavilan’, Vina Pedrosa, Spain

Bottle 38.5

So hard to find nowadays: 18 months of aging on American as well as Spanish oak. Yes! Resulting in a not too heavy, rather complex wine. Great with red meat as well as with cheese. A wine that really matters.

Red .

Pinot Noir, Johan Meyer, Elgin, South Africa

Bottle 39

Produced in the highlands near Capetown, which means in a relatively cool climate for South African standards, this wine enjoys a long growing season. It is clearly a very distinguished topwine. Vivid, with lots of character and quite fruity. Its origin results in a European-like, Burgundy-wise wonderful wine, completely biological, with no additions whatsoever. As a matter of fact, it is produced in cooperation with the Dutch TV personality and famous sommelier Lotte Wolf. Who happens to visit Nel every now and then.

2015 Gevrey Chambertin ‘Cuvée Alexis’, Domaine Guillon, Bourgogne, France

Bottle 67.5

Jean Michel Guillon selects grapes of the oldest vines for this beautiful wine: Pinot Noir from Côtes de Nuits. He uses new French oak barrels, no competition for the dark fruit fragrances of these grapes. Drink it a bit chilled and, if you manage, let it breathe before you drink. It ‘opens’ in air.
